

Tomorrow's Leaders

Meet the Melbourne school captains preparing to shape our world.
Their hopes, their dreams, their aspirations, in their own words

Picture: TIM CARRAFA

Ella Allan

KILBRED A COLLEGE MENTONE

Naomi Russo, 17

As leaders of tomorrow, it is our duty to work towards a better future for ourselves and the generations after us.

At the 2018 'School Strike for Climate Change' event, thousands of students across the country had the courage to stand up and voice their concern about the treatment of our environment.

We are aware of the environmental issues that are occurring and we know we have the right and the power to come together and influence positive decisions to ensure a long lasting and healthy planet.

Ella Allan, 17

Being a young Catholic woman in the Kilbreda College Community means to welcome all.

The acceptance of others in our diverse community allows the college to thrive and the students to feel proud and free to be who they are.

The hospitality our school shows can be extended to surrounding communities to build a more understanding and accepting society. If we, as a generation come together, we can change the way we treat the people around us, building an open and inclusive society.

“As leaders of tomorrow, it is our duty to work towards a better future for ourselves and the generations after us

NAOMI RUSSO

Naomi Russo